FLIGHTSAFETY'S BOMBARDIER GLOBAL VISION 5000/6000 FLIGHT SIMULATOR RECEIVES FAA AND EASA LEVEL D QUALIFICATION

LA GUARDIA AIRPORT, New York (October 29, 2012) – FlightSafety International is pleased to announce that its Bombardier Global 5000/6000 aircraft simulator has received Level D qualification from the Federal Aviation Administration and the European Aviation Safety Agency. The new simulator is located at FlightSafety's Learning Center in Columbus, Ohio.

“We are pleased to expand the training services we offer to operators of Bombardier aircraft with the Level D qualification of FlightSafety's new Global 5000/6000 full flight simulator by the FAA and EASA,” said Bruce Whitman, President & CEO.

Training using this new simulator will be available to all Bombardier Global Vision 5000/6000 aircraft operators starting in January 2013. It was designed and manufactured by FlightSafety to replicate the exact flying characteristics of the aircraft.

The new simulator features the company's electric motion and control loading technology and newly enhanced VITAL X visual system. It is equipped with the Rockwell Collins ProLine Fusion based Vision Flight Deck with four high resolution 15-inch diagonal active matrix liquid crystal displays. It is also equipped with a Head-Up Display (HUD), integrated Cursor Control Panel (CCP), Synthetic Vision System (SVS), Enhanced Vision System (EVS), dual Integrated Flight Information Systems (IFIS), Future Air Navigation System (FANS), Controller-Pilot DataLink Communication (CPDLC) and MultiScan and Weather Detection system.

FlightSafety offers training for Bombardier Learjet, Challenger and Global, CRJ, Dash and Q Series regional aircraft at 16 Learning Centers in Asia, Europe, South Africa and North America.
